Nebraska Drug Courts Connected Through New Interactive Web Page

The Nebraska Drug & Problem Solving Court Web site has a new look and many additional features designed to provide more information to the public, drug court professionals, probation, and the court system. The site's new photos and layout are designed to help court users access information more quickly and easily.

The Web site is designed to make content and calendars simpler to find and use.

"We are pleased to offer Nebraska's Drug Court information through our new web page, it improves the understanding of just what Drug and Problem Solving Courts are about and also makes it easier to make contact with us," said Scott Carlson, Statewide Coordinator of Problem-Solving Courts.

The home page has been redesigned to include an announcement and special events section with a clickable calendar and links to Drug Court locations throughout the state.

In coming months, additional enhancements will be introduced and calendar information will be continually updated.

According to Carlson, "This site better reflects what our courts are about. It provides current reports, links to new information and program contact information across the state."

The new Web site can be readily accessed through the Nebraska Judicial Branch Web site: <http://www.supremecourt.ne.gov> under the "Drug Courts and Other Problem-Solving Courts" button or directly accessed: <http://www.supremecourt.ne.gov/problem-solving/?sub6>. Page layout and construction was created by web designers at Nebraska.gov in partnership with Statewide Drug Court Coordinator, Scott Carlson.
